Summary of Legislation

Before a homeowners' association (HOA) can bring a lawsuit against a developer or builder in a construction defect case, this bill requires that the HOA's executive board first obtain approval from a majority of the unit owners. In seeking prior approval, the bill details various disclosures that must be made to unit owners, including details about the lawsuit, and its potential costs and benefits. The bill limits the amount and type of contact that a developer who is subject to the lawsuit may have with the unit owners in the HOA. Prior approval by unit owners is not required for cases in which the alleged construction damages are valued under $100,000.

State Expenditures

This bill may decrease workload in the Judicial Department beginning with FY 2017-18. The bill does not affect an HOA's right to pursue a remedy in the courts; however, the bill may reduce the number of construction defect claims considered by the courts where an HOA is unable to secure a majority vote from unit owners. This change may produce a minimal savings for the courts, but does not require a change in appropriations.

Effective Date

The bill was postponed indefinitely by the Senate Business, Labor and Technology Committee on March 13, 2017.
