Summary of Legislation

This bill requires the Colorado Commission on Criminal and Juvenile Justice (CCJJ) to study the issue of institutional child abuse in facilities operated by the Department of Human Services (DHS) and to report to the General Assembly by July 1, 2019. The bill also adds "youth in a facility" to the definition of institutional abuse. "Youth in a facility" is defined as a person younger than 21 who is being cared for in:

- a residential child care facility;
- a specialized group facility;
- a foster care home;
- non-certified kinship care; or
- a facility or community placement for a youth committed to the custody of the state Department of Human Services.

Background

Under current law, institutional abuse is defined as abuse that occurs in any public or private facility in the state that provides child care out of the home, supervision, or maintenance. If an investigation finds that institutional abuse has occurred, the investigation may:

- request that the owner, operator, or administrator formulate a plan of remedial action;
- request that the owner, operator, or administrator make administrative, personnel, or structural changes at the facility; or
- recommend to the licensing, overseeing, certificating, or authorizing entity that appropriate sanctions or actions be imposed against the facility.

State Expenditures

In FY 2018-19, workload will increase for the CCJJ, in the Department of Public Safety, to study the issue of institutional child abuse. Workload will also increase for the Department of Human Services, starting in FY 2018-19, to update rules to include "youth in a facility" to the definition of institutional abuse and to work with counties to implement the expanded definition. It is assumed that increases in workload will be accomplished within existing appropriations.

Local Government

The bill will impact local revenue, expenditures, and workload to local governments as discussed below.

Local investigations. County departments of human and social services will see an increase in workload and expenditures to complete more assessments and investigations to the extent that the bill increases reports of institutional abuse concerning youth between 18 to 21 years old.

Effective Date

The bill was signed into law by the Governor and took effect on May 30, 2018.
