Summary of Legislation

The bill creates the Federal Indian Boarding School Research Program in History Colorado to research and make recommendations to promote understanding of the abuse and deaths that occurred at to the federal Indian boarding school in Colorado. The program is repealed December 31, 2023.

Research and reporting. In consultation with the Southern Ute Tribe, the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, and the Colorado Commission on Indian Affairs (commission), History Colorado is required to research the events, physical and emotional abuse, and deaths that occurred at the federal Indian boarding school at Fort Lewis, including the victimization of families of the youth forced to attend the school, and the intergenerational impacts of the abuse. History Colorado is allowed to contract with a research entity to conduct portions of the research. Among other tasks, the work must include:

- conducting research to more accurately estimate the number of deaths at the school at Fort Lewis;
- identifying and mapping graves of Native American students buried at and around the school; and
- interviewing those with knowledge of the experiences of Native American students attending the school.

History Colorado is required to provide periodic updates to the Southern Ute Tribe, the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, and the commission, and deliver a final report by June 30, 2023.

After delivery of the final report, History Colorado, in consultation with the Southern Ute Tribe, the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, and the commission, is required to develop recommendations to increase understanding of the abuse that occurred and to support tribal members healing from the effects of the abuse. A summary of the findings and recommendations must be made publicly available on History Colorado's website, and a written copy must be delivered to relevant entities specified in the bill.

Teller Institute Property. At the time the Department of Human Services (DHS) vacates the former Teller Institute Federal Indian boarding school property, the all or a portion of the property must be sold or transferred to a state institution of higher education, a local government, a state agency, or a federally recognized tribe in Colorado that was impacted by the operation of the Teller Institute. The DHS must not sell or transfer the property until after the identification and mapping of any graves of Native American students buried at the school, and until the DHS, in consultation with tribal governments, develops a plan to acknowledge the abuse and victimization of students and families related to the operation of the Federal Indian boarding school located on the property.

Background

The Grand Junction Regional Center (GJRC) campus is located on the site of the former Teller Institute Federal Indian Boarding School. Senate Bill 16-178 directed the DHS to vacate the regional center campus to list the property for sale. House Bill 19-1062 added additional options for the DHS to transfer the property to a local government or institution of higher education. As of this writing, there are still residents at the GJRC campus. The GJRC campus is comprised of about 47 acres and 28 buildings.

The bill increases state expenditures in History Colorado by $702,333 in FY 2022-23 only, paid from the General Fund. Expenditures are shown in Table 2 and detailed below.
