Bill Summary

(Note: This summary applies to this bill as introduced and does not reflect any amendments that may be subsequently adopted. If this bill passes third reading in the house of introduction, a bill summary that applies to the reengrossed version of this bill will be available at <http://leg.colorado.gov>.)

The bill creates the Colorado wild horse management project (wild horse project), which is a nonprofit, state-owned corporate entity that manages and operates programs benefitting wild horses and supports wild horse management. The director of the wild horse project will be selected by a committee of the governor, the commissioner of agriculture, the executive director of the department of natural resources, and the majority leader of the house of representatives. The wild horse project has the powers normally afforded to a nonprofit corporate entity. The wild horse project will annually report to the governor, the joint budget committee, and the appropriate joint legislative committee at "SMART Act" hearings.

The wild horse project may seek federal payment for wild horse management support activities and gifts, grants, or donations. On the effective date of the bill, the state treasurer is required to transfer $1.5 million from the general fund to the wild horse project fund, which is created for use by the wild horse project.

A working group is established by the wild horse project to study and pursue long-term solutions for wild horses that are removed from federal horse management areas or held in federal facilities and make recommendations to the governor and the general assembly. The working group will have representation from the executive branch, the legislative branch, nonprofit organizations, businesses, the western slope, and the ranching community. The Colorado state director of the federal bureau of land management (bureau), the Southern Ute Tribe, and the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe may appoint representatives to the working group.

A wild horse stewardship program is created to help manage range health and infrastructure. The wild horse fertility control program is created to manage the wild horse herd population by collaborating, coordinating, and training people and entities to manage wild horse populations. Both programs are overseen by the wild horse project.

The commissioner of agriculture is required to provide support in the form of grants and contracts to assist with managing wild horse populations using fertility control methods, subject to approval by the bureau, until July 31, 2024, or until the wild horse project commences its own program to manage wild horse populations if commenced earlier than July 31, 2024.

1 Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

2 SECTION 1. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly
3 finds and declares:

4 (a) Colorado is home to four federally owned and protected wild
5 horse herds generally that are found within federal herd management 6 areas administered by the federal bureau of land management in

1 accordance with the federal "Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros
2 Act", Pub.L. 92-195;

3 (b) Wild horses are protected under federal law in the areas where 4 they are presently found and are an integral part of the natural system of 5 the public lands;

6 (c) Federal budgets have not kept pace with the many needs these 7 wild horse herds have, and this underfunding has clear negative effects
8 on state equities, Colorado's vital agricultural industry, rangeland
9 conditions, wildlife, and more;

10 (d) Federal underfunding has exacerbated the challenging 11 conditions that negatively affect the health of wild horse ranges and 12 federal herd management areas, and this further affects state and private 13 equities in state programs and rangeland quality;

14 (e) Colorado has the opportunity to serve the diverse interests of 15 livestock owners, wildlife, and range health by supporting responsible 16 wild horse management, stabilizing herd numbers, and ending the 17 unsustainable cycle of population growth followed by removal of wild 18 horses from the range;

19 (f) Localized volunteers, known as friend groups, undertake the 20 vast majority of care and management for these herds. These friend 21 groups provide hundreds of hours of selfless work for the betterment of 22 the wild horse herds, local communities, and surrounding rangelands. Yet 23 these friend groups have insufficient resources to meet the need that 24 exists and the growing challenges associated with sustained drought, and 25 they often struggle to find and retain reliable and qualified volunteers to 26 perform critical activities.

27 (g) Wild horse herds have long been a central part of the character

1 of Colorado and the West; in particular, they have been ingrained in the 2 history, culture, and current workings of local and ranching communities
3 and operators;

4 (h) Large helicopter roundups of wild horses, the condition of 5 these horses and herds, extended drought conditions, and our shared need
6 to ensure that Colorado rangelands and natural resources are well cared 7 for have been key concerns and challenges Colorado has recently faced, 8 and Colorado has a deep need and interest to address these concerns and 9 challenges to improve the situation;

10 (i) With current conditions, Colorado must take action to ensure 11 that it maintains healthy wild horse herds and healthy rangelands and 12 avoids key challenges, such as wild horse herds that are too large for the 13 health of the horses, existing care systems, and rangeland;

14 (j) Colorado, federal land managers and external experts, the wild
15 horse advocacy community, and key partners such as volunteer networks, 16 conservationists, and the ranching community have worked together to 17 identify strategies that would capitalize on current conditions, create a 18 sustainable way to improve the care of our wild horse herds, and care for 19 Colorado's natural resource equities;

20 (k) The federal bureau of land management in Colorado has 21 recently invested additional funding in key herd management areas to 22 improve conditions for wild horses and wildlife and is interested in 23 partnering with the state, wildlife organizations, and wild horse
24 advocates, and this interest further underscores the opportunity Colorado
25 has to work with federal and stakeholder entities, creating real outcomes 26 that will promote range health, horse herd health, and the health of 27 Colorado's agricultural and local economies;

1 (l) After extensive evaluation, the following efforts have been 2 identified as highly effective, highly efficient, and worthy of fostering:

3 (I) Providing state-level coordination, partnership development,
4 and, in particular, volunteer and paid human resource development to 5 support the existing work of the friend groups in delivering 6 contraceptives through darting;

7 (II) Rangeland care, including fence repair and replacement;

8 (III) Installing and maintaining infrastructure needed to support 9 the well-being of rangelands and wild horses; and

10 (IV) In particular, growing partnerships and networks to support
11 wild horse management;

12 (m) With the public's strong interest in, care of, and love of wild 13 horses, Colorado has an opportunity to catalyze a self-sustaining, but 14 state-supported, independent entity that will draw from private gifts,
15 grants, and donations to conduct its work;

16 (n) The core work of the independent entity will be to foster
17 diverse and creative partnerships and enlist a broad and diverse, but 18 reliable and sustainable, community to ensure the long-term sustainability
19 of Colorado's wild horse herds and rangelands;

20 (o) The wild horse project could include engaging and funding
21 volunteer networks, engaging veterans' organizations or other
22 organizations that have members with existing shooting skills for darting 23 efforts, engaging and creating partnership or funding opportunities in 24 local and ranching communities with close proximity to the herds, or 25 numerous other potential creative partnerships; and

26 (p) Through state action in creating the foundation from which 27 these activities can launch, Colorado efficiently and effectively solves a

1 multitude of challenges for a diverse range of interests in our state.
