Water Resources and Agriculture Review Committee. The board of veterinary medicine (board) is required to promulgate rules establishing certain veterinary medicine tasks that a licensed veterinarian may delegate to veterinary technicians and veterinary technician specialists and the recommended level of supervision for the tasks.

A licensed veterinarian may delegate tasks pursuant to the board's rules after first establishing a veterinarian-client-patient relationship with an animal or group of animals and the owner of the animal or animals. The licensed veterinarian is required to provide an appropriate level of supervision of the veterinary technician or veterinary technician specialist in accordance with applicable rules of the board. If there are not applicable rules related to the specific veterinary task that is being delegated, the veterinarian may delegate the task based on the assessment of the veterinary medical care being provided, the experience, education, and training of the person providing the care, and in compliance with all state and federal laws.

Beginning on January 1, 2026, the bill authorizes a veterinary technician to receive a veterinary technician specialist designation as part of the veterinary technician's registration, grants title protection for veterinary technician specialists, and prohibits the unauthorized practice as a veterinary technician specialist by a person who does not have a veterinary technician specialist designation.

1 Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

2 SECTION 1. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly
3 finds and declares that:

4 (a) In Colorado, there is an increasing need for veterinary care,
5 both for companion animals and for livestock or production animals;

6 (b) Licensed veterinarians in Colorado are stretched thin from the 7 increased demands for veterinary care, especially in rural areas of the 8 state where clients and patients may have more limited access to 9 veterinary care;

10 (c) Many veterinary practices in Colorado employ veterinary 11 technicians or veterinary technician specialists, who are staff that are

1 educated and trained to perform various veterinary services and are often
2 underutilized by supervising veterinarians;

3 (d) Clear guidelines are needed for veterinarians regarding the 4 veterinary services that may be delegated to veterinary technicians and 5 veterinary technician specialists to efficiently and effectively utilize the 6 education, training, and expertise of all veterinary staff and ensure that 7 Colorado's animals have adequate access to veterinary care; and

8 (e) Expanding the scope of practice for veterinary technicians and 9 veterinary technician specialists and authorizing licensed veterinarians to 10 delegate specific tasks to veterinary technicians and veterinary technician
11 specialists will allow these veterinary professionals to contribute more to 12 the delivery of veterinary care.
