SCHOOL REPAIR COSTS TAKE A BITE OUT OF DISTRICTS' FUND BALANCES

DENVER—The Office of the State Auditor (OSA) has released its annual Fiscal Health Analysis of all 178 Colorado school districts and found 30 school districts missed financial benchmarks this year. However, only four districts missed two benchmarks, which is the lowest level since the OSA began issuing this report in 2009.

Spending down fund balance for school maintenance and repairs, and increased costs due to higher numbers of special needs students were the most common explanations from the school districts that missed two benchmarks.

The OSA's Fiscal Health Analysis provides a set of ratios, together with the associated benchmarks, to evaluate financial indicators for each school district. This analysis examines the most current rolling 3-year period for which audited financial statements are available; this year covers the Fiscal Years Ending June 30, 2016, 2017, and 2018 and uses six ratios to assess a school district's financial health. For example, one of the ratios indicates whether the district has enough revenue to cover debt service payments, and another ratio indicates whether there has been an increase or decrease to the reserves in the general fund.

This year, auditors found the most commonly missed ratios were the Operating Margin Ratio, which identifies growth or decline in a school district's reserves over a 3-year period, and the Deficit Fund Balance Ratio, which may indicate that a district has insufficient resources in a governmental fund.

Under the direction of the state auditor, the OSA is the state's nonpartisan, independent external auditor with broad authority to audit state agencies, departments, institutions of higher education, and the Judicial and Legislative Branches. The OSA's professional staff serve the people of Colorado by addressing relevant public issues through high-quality, objective audits and reviews that promote accountability and positive change in government. Performance audits address whether programs operate in compliance with laws and regulations and in a manner that accomplishes intended program goals. Financial audits include annual audits of the state's basic financial statements and federal grants on a statewide level. IT audits review procedures and technology to ensure the confidentiality, integrity and availability of the state's critical computer systems and taxpayer data. The OSA also tracks about 4,000 Colorado local governments for compliance with the Local Government Audit Law.
