

Written Testimony from Former State Representative, Senator and former Adams County Commissioner
Alice P. Nichol

I oppose Senate bill 19-181 that will give stricter controls to local governments under the bills language "reasonable and unnecessary". I believe reasonably and necessary language was used already in the unanimous decision to once again place a permanent permit moratorium by the democratic board of Adams county commissioners. The fact is that Colorado citizens already have voted for the Oil and gas industry. I believe the Adams County Commissioners are confident that the bill will pass that gives them clout with their party's agenda of doing away with the industry, rather than upholding their oath of office to represent business and citizens equally. Thank you for hearing my testimony.
