securities board until 2037. In connection with continuing these entities, the bill:

- Clarifies that deficiency letters and communications concerning a deficiency letter are not public documents that may be inspected under the "Colorado Open Records Act";
- Requires that an investment adviser or an investment adviser representative doing business in Colorado must be licensed by the securities commissioner (commissioner) unless otherwise exempt;
- Specifies that the executive director of the department of regulatory agencies must consult with the securities board when appointing the commissioner; and
- Updates statutory language to be gender neutral.

The bill revises the process by which a cease-and-desist order is issued or a license is summarily suspended. Under current law, the commissioner issues a cease-and-desist order or conducts a summary license suspension by issuing an order to show cause as to why a cease-and-desist order or license suspension should not be issued. After appropriate notices are given, a hearing is scheduled with the securities board or an administrative law judge. At the hearing, it is determined whether to issue a cease-and-desist order or suspend the license and what form the order or suspension will take. The bill changes this process to authorize the commissioner to issue a preliminary cease-and-desist order or a summary license-suspension order. If the person that is the subject of the order disagrees with the order, the person may request a hearing to resolve the issue. The hearing must take place within 30 days after issuance of the order. If a hearing is not requested within 15 days after issuance of the order, the order becomes final. The person that is the subject of the order must obey the order until a hearing is requested.
