CONCERNING MODIFICATIONS TO THE COLORADO WORKS PROGRAM, AND, IN CONNECTION THEREWITH, MAKING AN APPROPRIATION.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

SECTION 1. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that:

(a) "Temporary Assistance for Needy Families" (TANF), known as the "Colorado Works Program" (works program), provides financial assistance and work supports to families living far below the federal poverty level. The works program should promote family safety, stability, and self-sufficiency by assisting with job preparation and supporting career goals and employment. As of fiscal year 2021-22, a parent with two children must make less than $421 per month in income to qualify for a basic cash assistance grant under the works program. The COVID-19 pandemic brought unprecedented hardships and changes to both families and the works program. Even before the COVID-19 pandemic, families enrolled in the works program were facing the greatest barriers to financial security and well-being.

(b) Families enrolled in the works program are eligible to receive cash assistance to help meet the family's ongoing basic needs, such as diapers, food, bus passes, and school supplies. Cash assistance payments were not adequate at the start of the works program in 1996 and since payments have not adjusted for inflation, cash assistance has eroded even further and failed to keep up with the cost of living in Colorado. In 1996, the amount of Colorado's cash assistance was 32.9% of the federal poverty level, but by 2021 it had fallen to 27.8% with the maximum amount of cash assistance for a parent with two children at $508 per month.

(c) Families can often face a "cliff effect" when the family receives more income through employment or a raise and then abruptly has its public assistance reduced or discontinued. Too often families are left without supports right when they begin to get their feet underneath them. Reducing the "cliff effect" will incentivize work, help parents stay employed, and create a smoother off-ramp toward employment, self-sufficiency, and economic security.

(d) Families can be better supported in the works program by reducing punitive sanctions and overly burdensome work requirements. While sanctions and work requirements are required by the federal government, states have some discretion on how to administer those requirements. Colorado has made some strides in easing these requirements and can do more to be responsive to families' circumstances and needs. Sanctions, or financial penalties that are issued when a participant does not meet the work requirements of the works program, are disproportionately applied to certain families, including families of color, do not achieve the intended outcome of connecting families to sustainable employment, and increase the administrative burden on case managers and counties. Moreover, families who receive sanctions face the most significant barriers to employment and economic security, such as a child being hospitalized, domestic violence, lack of a vehicle, or less work experience.

(e) Colorado receives federal TANF funds each year and the state is permitted to retain a certain amount of unexpended funds for future use in the event of an economic downturn or caseload growth. Colorado has two sets of TANF reserves: A state TANF long-term reserve and a TANF reserve in each county. Although there was severe economic downturn, including historic unemployment, during the COVID-19 pandemic, the amount of money in the reserves actually increased in Colorado. The beginning fiscal year 2021-22 balance of all county TANF reserves was $61.2 million and the balance in the state TANF long-term reserve, which has a mandatory floor of $33 million, was $76.2 million. In total, there was more than $137 million in TANF reserves in Colorado at the end of the 2020-21 fiscal year.

(f) To support the economic recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic, the department of human services may receive additional money to support subsidized training and employment. The money may be used to support current Colorado works participants and individuals who are eligible for short-term non-recurrent assistance and other assistance, as defined by the state board of human services, whose income does not exceed 200% of the federal poverty level.

(2) Therefore, the general assembly declares that Colorado must prioritize strategies and investments to remove barriers to employment and economic security for families and children experiencing extreme poverty in the state. Colorado should ensure a basic cash assistance amount sufficient enough to lift families out of extreme poverty and ensure that it keeps with the rising cost of living; make improvements in the way the works program serves families, including reducing the "cliff effect"; elevate family voices in the works program; and improve outreach and communication about the works program.

(3) The general assembly further finds and declares that the increase in basic cash assistance grants and funding for subsidized employment established in this act are critical government services.

SECTION 2. In Colorado Revised Statutes, 26-2-705, amend (2)(a) and (2)(e) as follows:

26-2-705. Works program - purposes. (2) The purposes of the works program are to:
