Bill Topic: RESOURCE EFFICIENCY BUILDINGS ELECTRIC VEHICLES

Summary of Fiscal Impact:

<input type="checkbox"/> State Revenue	<input type="checkbox"/> TABOR Refund
<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> State Expenditure	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Local Government
<input type="checkbox"/> State Transfer	<input type="checkbox"/> Statutory Public Entity

The bill would have required that new and majorly-renovated commercial buildings and multifamily residences meet minimum electric vehicle capable and electric vehicle ready parking space requirements. It would have minimally increased state workload in FY 2022-23.

Appropriation Summary: No appropriation would have been required.

Fiscal Note Status: The fiscal note reflects the enrolled bill. This bill was vetoed by the Governor; therefore, the impacts identified in this analysis do not take effect.

Summary of Legislation

The bill relocates and updates existing statutes requiring contractors to offer specific energy and water efficiency options for new home buyers, including providing lists of local solar energy options. It also requires that new construction or major renovation of existing high-occupancy commercial and residential building projects meet minimum electric vehicle charging capacity requirements.

The bill requires the State Electrical Board to promulgate rules requiring compliance with the electric vehicle charging requirements for high-occupancy buildings when issuing inspection permits, and setting standards for waiving these requirements.

State Expenditures

The bill minimally increases workload for the State Electrical Board within the Department of Regulatory Affairs (DORA) and the Department of Law in FY 2022-23. The increased workload aligns with existing duties and programs within DORA and should have a minimal fiscal impact on the agency. Workload will also increase in Department of Law to assist DORA in promulgating new rules. This can be accomplished within existing appropriations.

Local Government

Local governments will see an increased workload to update local review and inspection processes to ensure projects comply with the bill's requirements.

Effective Date

This bill was vetoed by the Governor on June 7, 2022.
