Summary of Legislation

House Bill 21-1110 required state agencies to implement accessibility plans for their information technology systems by July 1, 2024, after which they are liable for discrimination claims. This bill extends a one-year grace period from liability if the noncompliant agency creates a progress report demonstrating a good-faith effort towards meeting accessibility requirements.

State Expenditures

The bill minimally impacts workload and costs in state agencies in FY 2024-25 only. No change in appropriations is required.

Judicial Department. Workload may decrease in trial courts if the bill results in fewer civil actions filed against state agencies or if such cases are dismissed.

All state agencies. Workload may increase in any noncompliant agency to create its progress report. To the extent the grace period reduces penalties that would have been paid by state agencies, costs will decrease.

Effective Date

The bill was signed into law by the Governor and took effect on May 24, 2024.
