Summary of Legislation

Current law allows electroconvulsive treatment (ECT) to be performed on minors who are under the age of 16 years old only if certain conditions are met. The bill repeals the requirement that ECT must be necessary to treat life-threatening malignant catatonia.

The bill also permits a minor to object to ECT and outlines the process for adjudication. However, a minor may not object if ECT is medically necessary to treat life-threatening malignant catatonia.

State Expenditures

Starting in 2025-26, workload in the Department of Regulatory Agencies, the Department of Public Health and Environment, and the Behavioral Health Administration will minimally increase to update rules, procedures, and technical forms for licensed medical professionals and health care facilities, and to respond to complaints. Additionally, workload in the Judicial Department and Office of the Child's Representative may increase to the extent that minors object to ECT, require the appointment of a guardian ad litem, or initiate civil cases in district courts. This workload is expected to be minimal and no change in appropriations is required.
