Summary of Legislation

Current law requires municipalities to adopt energy codes that meet certain standards, which phase in between 2022 and 2026. The bill exempts any municipality with a population under 2,500 residents from the energy code requirements.

State Expenditures

The Colorado Energy Office provides support to local governments in adopting required energy codes. To the extent that fewer municipalities seek support from the office, its workload will decrease. No change in appropriations is required.

Local Government

The bill decreases workload in municipalities that no longer have to update their energy codes.

Effective Date

The bill takes effect 90 days following adjournment of the General Assembly sine die, assuming no referendum petition is filed.
