Greg Cottrell Amend Cottrell Printing	We have one elevator in a 21 year-old 2-story building that is used an average of 2 times a day. We have always had a service contract (with Thyssenkrupp) that inspects and maintains the elevator on a calendar quarterly basis (which costs us about $275.00 each quarter). Then along came the State "conveyance regulations", causing our small building additional expense in annual fee and 3rd party inspections. It seems that there could be "graduated" regulations and fees for the immense difference in risk/safety exposure on these conveyances, especially if evidence is offered as to industry service contracts.
