

Survey of Voter Attitudes on Marijuana Smoking and Vaping

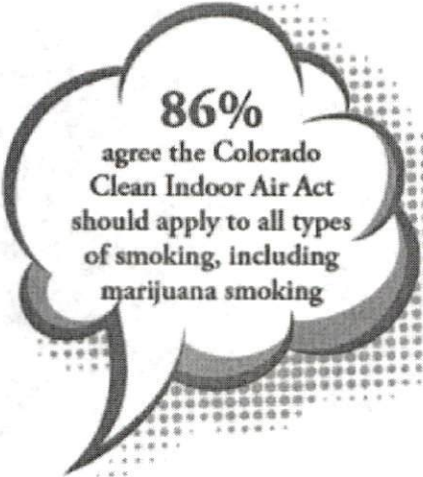

Kupersmit Research conducted a survey of 300 Colorado voters in the Spring of 2017 and found:

Coloradans understand that secondhand smoke is bad for their health and bad for their family's health.

They know that important protections are in place to keep their indoor air clean through the Colorado Clean Indoor Air Act.

80%
of Coloradans
support keeping and strengthening the
Clean Indoor Air Act

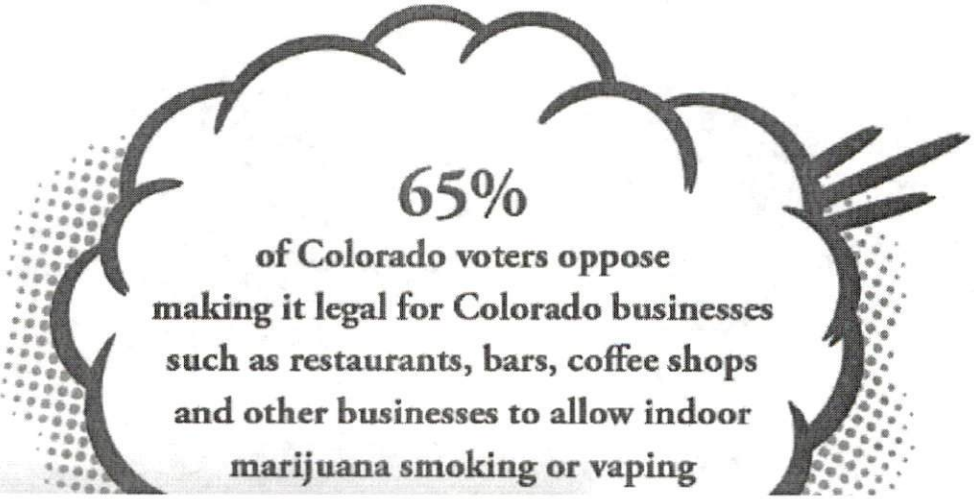

86%
agree the Colorado
Clean Indoor Air Act
should apply to all types of smoking, including marijuana smoking

76%
say the Colorado Clean Indoor Air Act should apply to vaping

Coloradans understand that allowing marijuana smoking in restaurants, bars, coffee shops and other businesses is the wrong direction for our state. They know that smoke-free air is good for the health of their families, their communities and our state's economy.

65%
of Colorado voters oppose making it legal for Colorado businesses such as restaurants, bars, coffee shops and other businesses to allow indoor marijuana smoking or vaping
